Harrison, Ark.—Luther Wise, Harrison, and Wiley Orr, Benton, Ark., striking employees of the Missouri and North Arkansas railroad were sentenced to from seven to ten years each state prison Wednesday, pleading guilty to charges of arson growing out of the burning of a M. & N. A. bridge.

BULLETIN

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Harrison, Ark.—Following two days of intense excitement, the result of "armed action" by citizens gathered at Harrison, Ark., to oust the strikers, one man was lynched, another wounded during a "roundup" of alleged strikers and more than 200 persons were forced to leave the town. The "army" of 150 militiamen of 1,000. Harrison Wednesday took on a normal atmosphere. Further trouble was not expected to follow the "clean up" of persons suspected of being strikers. It was believed that the town had knowledge of the bridge burnings and other depredations along the line of the Missouri and North Arkansas railroad.

Iowa Sheriff Here After Witnesses to Aid Mrs. Rice

Evidencing the importance placed by the defense in the Kneeskern murder trial now at the close of its second week at Charles City, Ia., the testimony of Mrs. Fred Rice, Shopiere woman and mother of Mrs. Irene Van Brocklin murdered a year ago, was seen with the appearance in Janesville Wednesday morning of O. G. Ellingson, of Decatur, Ia., former sheriff.

After a visit to the Gazette, former Sheriff Ellingson, went to the jail to get character witnesses for Mrs. Rice, the state having already summoned five to use against her.

Looking for Witnesses Ellingson was met here by Frank Kneeskern's attorneys and expected to secure several witnesses to go back to Charles City. Mr. Ellingson has taken a deep interest in the murder trial, having arrested Van Brocklin after conducting an investigation of the murder December 1921 when he was called to the little cabin in which Mrs. Rice and Charles Van Brocklin lived and had been murdered. Ellingson relinquished the sheriff's office Jan. 1, after eight years and is now conducting a hotel at Decatur, Ia.

According to Mr. Ellingson, nothing in years has created so much interest as the Kneeskern case, since the Castalia, Ia., cattle man is well known and liked and his conviction at his first trial was a surprise. With the defense having established many discrepancies in the testimony of Elmer Van Brocklin, brother of Charles, who was the chief witness for the state, a verdict of acquittal or a disagreement is freely predicted.

Murder Trial Develops Conflict Between State and Shopiere Resident

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Charles City, Iowa.—A battle between the mother of Irene Van Brocklin, the slain wife of Charles Van Brocklin, and the state of Iowa has developed in the second trial of Frank Kneeskern charged with the double murder and once convicted in his own state.

Mrs. Fred Rice of Shopiere, Rock county, Wisconsin, apparently certain in the belief that her daughter was not killed by Kneeskern has plainly indicated that she believes the man guilty is Elmer Van Brocklin, the brother of the murdered man, and whose testimony at the first trial was largely responsible for the conviction of Kneeskern. Mrs. Rice has faintly on the stand just at the time when she was being asked as to her own character and about her marriage.

She said she had been married 15 years and her daughter's age is given as 19. Also Mrs. Rice says she is 24 years old and the attorneys were attempting to close up the case against Mrs. Rice, fainting and was carried from the witness stand.

The whole reputation of the Van Brocklin family is being washed out. The story of "Gypsy Dan" Van Brocklin, known in the northeastern part of Iowa as a floater and "meat doer" has come into the trial. The Van Brocklins who were killed lived in a shack whose misery was apparent to all.

OIL CONTROVERSY AIRING NEAR END

Committee Will Not Demand Full Story From Magnate, Assertion.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington.—Any considerable airing of the Teapot Dome controversy, which has been the subject of sub-committee investigating prices and conditions in the oil industry appeared improbable Wednesday when Harry F. Sinclair, chairman of the board of the Sinclair Oil Company, Inc., appeared before the committee.

Chairman LaFollette and the inquiry committee members were understood to have decided that the full story of the oil controversy would be obtained from him by the committee.

Testimony by Mr. Sinclair relative to organization last February of the Mammoth Oil company, a subsidiary of the Sinclair Consolidated, brought Senator LaFollette's committee near to Teapot Dome Tuesday.

Asked for what total stock was issued, Mr. Sinclair testified that 10 shares were issued for cash as qualifying shares and the remaining shares of both classes were issued in accordance with an offer made by him last March 9 to the Mammoth company. THE WOODEN CANNON Simon Girty, the renegade white, with his band of reds once attacked Ft. Henry, in West Virginia.
The fort was held by a small band of men who made up for the smallness in numbers by the justness of their cause and the high sense of manhood which they fought to maintain. Girty and his reds made repeated assaults during the day on the little stockade but were in each case, repulsed by the strategy and the deadly fire of the brave band. In desperation, Girty with his few white friends and Indian warriors, determined on measures entirely different. They found a maple log already hollowed by nature, mounted it on a roller, wrapped it with chains, plugged the butt, loaded it with much powder, stuffed it with stones and scraps of iron, and taking it within sixty yards of the fort blazed away.
Girty and his followers crowded around to see the fort go to pieces and the last bulwark of the defense fall. What then was the amazement of those who survived that not a stone or a missile hit the fort. The wooden cannon, sacred to the memory of the fatuous foolishness of untrained minds, blew into a thousand bits and the charge was scattered among the Girty forces, killing many of them. The few inside the fort gave the invaders and besiegers the heartiest laugh of a year. They still stood intact and most of them lived to see Girty destroyed, and the reds defeated completely.
J. C. Ralston, the able Madison correspondent of the Milwaukee Journal, remarks that the republican party has been kicked out of the state capital, by the coalition of the state administration forces and the socialists. Somehow the situation reminds one of Simon Girty and his reds.
In the primary and again in the election the democratic party was buried deep. It appeared that it had passed out of existence in Wisconsin, but it will live again. It was a favorite trick of Simon Girty's to garb himself as a friend and appear what he was not. In Wisconsin the republican party if "destroyed" was garbed in other clothing and while it bore the name did not carry the banner of the party. But that has been done in other times and the party has still lived just as the democratic party has withstood several destructions. The last stand of the republican party is made by the few who represent it in the senate and assembly. The wooden cannon is being loaded with every manner of measure legislating man into the millennium. It is bound with the chains of class and prejudice. It is stuffed with the wet powder of untold experiment and wadded with vain hope. When the lanyard is pulled, like the experience of Girty, on that September day, 1777, the result may repeat history.

It is an unhappy moment to contemplate the New Year bills so soon after the New Year bells.
ARE THERE NO INCENTIVE TO MEN TODAY?
The sad man, still with youth as his greatest asset, who plays Kelly pool and in the interim between shots curses the world because there is no opportunity any more and declares that a bunch of swollen plutocrats own it all, might profitably read a recent contribution to current information which tells of the rise of 50 railroad men from the ranks to their present positions. In our own vicinity there is Byram, of the St. Paul, at 15 a call boy; Markham of the I. C., a truck laborer at 29; Finley, of the Northwestern, a chain bearer; Willard of the E. & O., a truck laborer; Sam Felton, C. & G. W., a rodmán at 15; William Sproule, U. P., a freight clerk; W. T. Noonan, E.
R. & P., an office boy; C. R. Gray, U. P., a telegraph operator at 15. And there are many others.
Only ten of the 25 biggest rail chiefs started with a college education, the rest grew up from the ranks.
These men did not jump to the top in a moment; they went upward with successive steps, the average age of reaching a presidency of a railroad being 52. But that is not so long in a life-time. Nor, it is quite safe to say, did any of them get to the top by anything more than honest endeavor and continuous effort to do whatever task was theirs, the very best possible.
The same rule applies to the other vocations in life. There is opportunity at the top—a place for the ambitious and the eager man. He has more advantages than were given to most of the examples presented here in that he has access readily to libraries and vocational and night schools and a score of ways to play cleanly and decently when it comes time for recreation.
Young Opportunity is here by a large majority.

FARMER IS GETTING RESULTS

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN Washington.—The last few days have brought two fresh developments in the achievements of the American farmer in the matter of organization for the improvement of his economic position.
First, the Federal Reserve Board has issued two important rulings liberalizing the banking rules of the Federal Reserve System in favor of the farmer.
Second, the American Railway Association has appointed a special agricultural representative whose duty it will be to travel about the country and seek to meet the demands of the farmer for shipping facilities.
These developments add to the long series of triumphs scored by the newly awakened American farmer. Over the last two years, the title of the soil have been organizing their forces and making demands and so far they have not failed in any instance.

The farmer in normal times, frequently is the butt of the city man's humor. The "haysced," the "rube" and the "bo" have been subjected to a great deal of ridicule. But normal times are a thing of the past. Many mistakes were performed by the war and one of the greatest was the galvanization of the American farmer into a great political force capable of bringing about economic reforms that such traditionally powerful influences as "Wall Street," "the Interests" and such could not achieve.
The explanation is that the rural population is nearly 50 percent of the entire population of the United States. People who live in big cities, various industrial groups and the several organizations of different sorts are intensively organized and they feel that the lonely farmer in the country cannot possibly amount to much. They have been forgetting that the lonely farmer, in an emergency, is able to multiply himself by a factor which will give him an aggregate power equal to all the others put together.
That is precisely what happened. During the war the farmer got good prices but his costs were high. Suddenly, the crash came in the summer of 1920 when prices of all sorts of commodities tumbled down, headed by farm products. The farmer had planted his crops at high cost; he was compelled to sell them, in many cases, for less than what he paid for his seed.

It took some time to effect the organization necessary to bring about the multiplication of the lonely farmer, but the work was done by two or three active associations and federations of farm leaders. They now have the farmers of the country fairly well organized and in position to ask Congress to take such steps as may be necessary to bring back farm prosperity.
The Agricultural Bloc in congress was the first achievement of the newly organized farmer. Members of both senate and house were quick to see the factor in the country and that he meant business. There followed a quick succession of developments to improve his position. First, railroad rates on farm products were lowered so that farm products could be shipped to market at a lower cost. Then bank rates were lowered so that the farmer could borrow for smaller interest charges. In the various political elections, both local and national, this organized farmer made his irresistible force felt.

The two recent developments indicate that he is increasing his power. The principal reform on which the farmer has concentrated his attention has been improvement in farm credits. He has complained that the merchant and the manufacturer can get all the financial accommodation they need at the banks but the farmer cannot. The answer to all this has been that farmers want money for a long time. The merchant or manufacturer borrows from 30 to 50 days. The farmer wants to borrow for periods ranging from six months to a year and the stock raiser wants to borrow for three years. There are indications now that this need will be met.
The new ruling of the federal reserve board provides that bankers' acceptances—a form of notes running for six months—may be handled as acceptances secured by goods held in storage may be discounted at these banks. This puts the farmer on the same basis, practically, with the merchant and manufacturer. It gives the same facility to this sort of paper as has been given to the short time commercial paper.
The ruling was made with special reference to farmers' cooperative associations. It now is permitted for these cooperatives to issue acceptances based on their crops and have these acceptances discounted by the member banks of the federal reserve system.

The storage ruling is of special importance.
One of the bitterest complaints of the farmer is that when his crop is made, he must dump it on the market, because he cannot borrow money with which to pay his expenses while he is waiting for better prices. The effect of all farmers' selling their crops at the harvest season naturally depresses prices. With the ability to borrow, they can hold back portions of their crops and thus continue to get good prices over a considerable period of time. The new ruling enables them to do this. They can put their crops in storage and then borrow on the warehouse receipt, waiting six months, if they desire, to pay back the money.
Within that time they presumably would have opportunity to sell at fair prices.
Elmer Knutson of St. Cloud, Minn., is the man who has been appointed by the Car Service Division of the American railway association to act as a special railroad representative for the benefit of the farmers. The railway association has provided this facility so that if the farmers have any complaint about the way the railroads are handling their shipments, they will have some one with whom to discuss the matter. Mr. Knutson's instructions are to travel about the agricultural producing sections and keep in close touch with cooperative and other farm organizations.

Car shortage at harvest periods has been one of the chief evils against which the farmer has had to contend. One of his oldest complaints is that his crops often rot on the ground because he cannot get cars in which to ship them to market. It will be part of Mr. Knutson's duties to take care of such complaints and provide ample car supplies, where possible, for farm shippers.
The farmers want still more things and, doubtless, will get them. They want a whole new banking system for special use; and revised railway rates, with more things additional than appear on a list in a letter to Saint Claus.

One of the sensible movements of the government in the effort to care for the disabled soldiers, is to offer to train those taking agriculture in the vocational schools, on their own farms.
But the men must rent, or purchase their own farms and the government wants those who have small farms for either purpose to let the fact be known. The Gazette will aid in this if anyone wants such a tenant or can sell a farm on terms that would appeal to a veteran who has taken the vocational school course.

With all the cast suffering from a blizzard, New York City buried in snow and New England showing its way out, the beautiful and equally elated Southern Wisconsin has another reason to be pleased that he is where he lives.
It seems remarkable that we can find members of good society following the trail of criminal corruption of the prohibition law violators.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST
THE CALENDAR
Here is a calendar to serve the year.
A page to mark each day that's new begun.
Behold the first which wears its figure one!
At dawn another morning will appear.
But will it come with sorrow or with cheer?
There is no clue for man to solve upon Time breeds the hour which lives and passes on.
Nor stays for laughter or the glistening tear.
This day is fair, enjoy it while you may!
Tomorrow you may find this page, You cannot lengthen it or bid it stay.
Its measured sands run swiftly through the gauge.
But this is sure: who wakes tomorrow morn, Shall find a new day for his service born.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. HOULTON
Speaking of columns, and we are always speaking of columns, that being our more or less business as it were, we were delighted to find the following in Mr. Britannica's W. K. encyclopedia: "Trajan's column, finished about 110 A. D., is said to be one of the best and is still greatly admired in Rome."
But, as Postmarks says, "Trajan didn't have to get one out every day."

Who's Who Today

SIR JOHN BRADBURY Sir John Bradbury, a British member of the reparation commission which went to Paris recently has earned the unenviable title of "the most hated man in France." He is the author of the British proposal for the reparation of the war which was put forth at the conference of Premiers. Since the French are against the plan Sir John is naturally the target for any lowering of the bars.
The bitterness is doubly strong because he took measures to get the German proposals to favor the British proposals put forth at the Paris meetings of the reparation commission.
Sir John was born in 1872.
His father was a member of the House of Commons and he has two sons and one daughter. From 1911 to 1913 he was an insurance commissioner and a member of the national health insurance committee. Since 1913 he has been joint permanent secretary to His Majesty's Treasury. He was also created Knight Commander of the Bath in 1913.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

Labor and Immigration.
There is an insistent demand in some industrial circles for at least a temporary relaxation of the terms of the present restrictive immigration law. At the base of the demand is an admitted shortage of labor. The way to make up this shortage, it is represented, is to permit a given number of men suited for these kinds of labor to come into the country.
There wouldn't be the slightest trouble about getting this labor if the law were relaxed on the other side. The supply from some sections of the country is ready to come over at a minute's notice and exceeds the demand. Other sections have hardly sent their legal quota. The only question is as to the wisdom or unwisdom of lowering the bars.
The fact is, according to those in best position to know, that there is no actual shortage of potential labor in this country, but only a poor distribution of the labor we have, plus a considerable shortage of labor in some sections of the country. The way to make up this shortage is to do any kind of work it can keep out of.
Some of our industries, notably that of production of coal, are greatly overmanned. Industry also is adversely affected by seasonal production, which involves large numbers of men of employment and of idleness. If it were possible to allocate to the several industries approximately the labor they need, and if it were further possible to readjust things so as to stabilize and equalize the demand throughout the year, and if all men were willing to do the kind of work they are fitted to do, there wouldn't be any labor problem that need look to immigration for solution.
One of the great troubles about labor in the United States is that the average citizen does not attach to honest manual toil the dignity that is inherent in it. There is an over-crowding forward for the "white collar jobs" and not gratification enough to the other kinds of employment.
And this is largely due to the fact that the idea about the social values of this and that kind of labor.
The best judgment about this labor problem in its relation to immigration appears to be that a letting down of the bars would afford a temporary relief in some industrial quarters only to complicate still further in the long run a situation that is already distinctly disturbing. The way to solve this American labor problem is to solve it by the human material that is now within the country's gates. This can be done in part through education, in part through a readjustment of the country's industrial structure, and in part through a change in the social and mental attitude toward what is generally known as manual labor. Immigration may be "the easiest way," but congress and the interests it represents should consider whether it is not also the worst way to solve the labor problem and the political welfare of the nation.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author BLOW, CHILDREN, BLOW, BLOW WITH CARE They're drilling children in England now in the rudimentary but important business of blowing the nose.
And this art, simple and instinctive as it seems, threatens to become a lost art, like wiggling the ears, wiping children to their physical injury. The nasal drill is of distinct advantage for relieving the symptoms of adenoids, and as a prevention of colds. Many cases of adenoids in school children must be ascribed to the depraving influence of five hours of confinement in foul air in school.
My foul air! I mean air heated away above the healthful limit of 68 degrees Fahrenheit. Such air one encounters in nearly every indoor schoolroom in cold weather. I visited the principal of a large high school the other day and found him baking under a room temperature of 76 degrees—and some folks were burning waxed paper in their furnace, trying to keep warm. I told the principal that his school (he claims 2,200 pupils) is still back in the nineteenth century, and he thought I was just children attending these old fashioned schools almost fast to blow their noses in school, lest the old fashioned teachers take offense and give them demerits. It is a moving picture of whiffing.
The nasal drill, as performed in stead in England, is as follows: The children stand as far apart as possible in their furnace, trying to keep warm. Each pupil has a wide open, each pupil has a hand a paper handkerchief. At the command ONE, all stand erect, chest out, shoulders back and head held straight up. TWO, hold handkerchiefs spread out in left hand beneath the nostrils. THREE, grasp the nose between the eyes with right thumb and forefinger, without compressing the tip of the nose, pull it up to level of shoulder. FOUR, blow down the nose, bowing the head forward and down and at the same time saying "BLOW, BLOW, BLOW" three times. FIVE, breathe in through the mouth, slowly raising the elbow again to level of shoulder.
Repeat this rhythmically about ten times, then burn the paper handkerchiefs.

The Touch of a Woman's Hand funeral arrangements are being made.

Women have a tender sense that seems to be lacking in the masculine make-up; a sort of instinctive knowledge of what much more than a man's blunder which would augment the grief of those left behind.

Realizing this, we have secured the who understands not only the scientific side of her profession, but the human-nature side as well.

The Wall Flower

By MARY RUBIN CAM

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Princess Nicholson is so shy that meeting new people is a painful experience. She lives in a sort of seclusion with her aunt, Maude, her uncle Peter, and her daughter Gladys, who is heavily built, but very kind and popular. Gladys is in this "set" too, but generally ignored and overlooked. She has been neglected and snubbed so much that she believes herself repulsively homely, too unattractive mentally and physically ever to make friends.

When Morton Newberry begins to like her, she returns his affection to an intense degree. The little friendship becomes love—when Gladys decided she wanted her mostly because he was the only boy who never paid attention to her—goes after him—and succeeds in marrying him. Princess is heartbroken. Then suddenly Mrs. Gates, a decorator from New York, who she met the summer before, asks her to spend the winter with her.

A CONCERT Chapter 47

"Have you found that out already?" George asked and smiled at her. "We're all in love with Gloria."

Pan took her hand from her mouth, where it had flown the instant she realized her thoughts had been expressed aloud.

Of course she knew George was in love with her friend. Who could help it?

She felt awfully sorry for him. He must be unhappy about it. George meantime did not seem particularly unhappy, he seemed rather amused.

"You're a naive child," he said finally. "Do you like music?"

"No," Pan answered. "That is, I never have. I don't like it well enough, because they don't try to be anything but tunes in a special sort of time, but I don't care for the classical things."

Then she added: "I ought to. Aunt Maude says I haven't any musical sense, because I don't like the piano teacher played at her concert."

"I'm sure I shouldn't either," George answered, and Pan felt suddenly justified in her dislike of Miss Edwidge's heavy, heavy, ponderous selections.

"There's a nice concert tonight," George went on. "Better come with me. We'll have a bit of dinner first in a quiet little restaurant. I know of."

Not for worlds would he have missed the chance of taking this young girl to her first concert! George had lived in a world of losing weight?

MARKETS

Complete Daily Report Furnished By a Leased Associated Press Wire

GRAIN

Chicago Review.—Despite war news, selling which appeared to be largely on foreign account, turned the wheat market downward. Wednesday's early dealings, prices were also bearish, notwithstanding reports that the part of traders who had Tuesday had been active in purchasing. Besides, some news was taken of reports that Argentine offerings to Europe were larger. The opening, which varied from $1.20 to $1.25, was followed by a decline to $1.15, and then something of a rally.

Subsequently bulls were at a disadvantage, owing to some degree to assertions that 15 points decline which had taken place in the value of francs was equal to a decline of 15 points in wheat. The market closed heavy, 35¢ net lower, with May $1.15 1/2, July $1.15 1/2, and September $1.15 1/2. The market was followed by moderate declines all around and then something of a rally.

FINANCE

Wall Street Review.—New York.—Inability to meet margin calls caused another wave of selling in the opening of Wednesday's stock market. Pressure was most effective against the oil, steel, equipment and automobile stocks. The market was depressed 1 1/2 and National City and U. S. Steel each declined 1 point. A few stocks, however, showed a tendency also was noted in Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific, U. S. Rubber, U. S. Realty, Peoples Gas and Public Service.

Gains of a point each were recorded by Eschscholtz Packing, California Petroleum and Reynolds Springs, while Standard of California, and Western Union, declined 1/2 point. Foreign exchanges opened weak, demand sterling dropping 1/2, francs dropping 1/2, and the dollar declining 1/2. The market was followed by moderate declines all around and then something of a rally.

HEALTH WORK HAS GREAT RESULTS

Deaths From Insanitary Conditions Cut 75 Pct., Report Shows.

Calling attention of the city council and the board of health to the great forward strides made in health work in Janesville, the past few years, Dr. Fred B. Welch, city health officer, and Dr. Leigh J. Woodworth, sanitary inspector, have compiled statistics showing the decline in deaths from insanitary conditions from 1919 when there was no sanitary inspection, to three in 1921 and 1922.

"With the closing of the year 1922, we wish to make a record of the work accomplished by our department," their report says. "Few people realize just what has been done, during the past few years, in Janesville in the line of sanitation as we wish to bring this to your attention."

Many streets have been sewerage, privy vaults abolished and sanitary latrines have been installed. The garbage collection system installed, food inspected, and the state and local health laws and regulations enforced, the milk ordinance put into effect.

Our garbage collection system, which is one of the best in the state, has been in force for two years and was a big step forward in sanitation as it does away with the old garbage piles and dumps around the city.

The street cleaning and dumping inspector have been active in the elimination of minor nuisances connected with the care of yards and lots, garbage dumps, defective drainage, dirty alleys and streets. All these things are most desirable, as health and decency as well as comfort depend upon them.

Proof of Efficient Work
What has been the effect of this improved sanitary work on the health of the community? What have we to show for the dollars spent upon all this work? These questions may well be asked, so we wish to give an accounting.

That there have been fewer contagious diseases does not enter into this as many of these contagious diseases have no relation to sanitation. It is principally the intestinal diseases which show whether or not proper sanitary measures are being followed. This is because this type of disease depends upon the improper disposal of garbage, human excrement and flies. Therefore, to prove conclusively the value of these sanitary reforms we must show a marked decrease in diarrhoea, enteritis, dysentery and cholera infantum. Also that these diseases are caused by fly contamination. It is evident that fly infection cannot occur when there are no flies, also that the greatest amount of sickness and death must occur when the fly incidence is at its height—that is, when there are the most flies—so soon after. First the flies must become contaminated with diarrhoeal discharges from poorly constructed privies or in the careless handling of the excrement from the people sick with one of these diseases. Next, the fly carries this contamination to the food and drink of other people and they become sick.

Epidemic in 1918
In 1918 there was a large epidemic of intestinal disease in Janesville. It occurred in the fall and winter months, the time when the city was infested with flies. Hundreds of cases were prostrated with dysentery and the epidemic lasted over a month. Due to the fact that this epidemic came at the time when flies were most prevalent, makes it seem that fly contamination was responsible. A careful study of this epidemic and of those which came the two following years showed conclusively that fly contamination was the cause and that epidemic was due to poor sanitation. At that time there were many poorly constructed privy vaults and the flies had easy access to them and to the food and drink of the people. There was no supervision and regular enforcement of the screening laws to protect the food offered for sale.

When the sanitary inspections began, these laws were enforced, the garbage system was installed, the outdoor toilets given proper care, manure piles and horse manure cleaned so that there has been a decrease in the number of flies and no epidemic the last two years.

While it is true that the fly incidence is not the only factor in the year due to weather conditions, still we find that the greatest amount of sickness and the greatest number of deaths each year come during the time when there are the most flies. Also, while weather conditions have been most favorable for the increase of flies, there has been a decrease in their numbers. That the automobile, in eliminating horse manure piles about the city, has played a great part in this decrease must be conceded.

The city's extensive sewer program has helped in elimination of the outside toilet and this has helped in preventing fly contamination. From this it may seem that the sanitary work has been along three lines: First, elimination of the breeding places of the flies with the decrease in their numbers; second, the elimination of contamination of the flies that are present; and third, the protection of food and drink from flies whether or not contamination has occurred.

Statistics Show Results
That this work has been a real promoter of health in this community, the following figures will show. These are the deaths from intestinal diseases taken from the bureau of vital statistics the past five years:

Year	No. of Deaths	Sanitary Inspection
1918	9	No sanitary inspection.
1919	11	No sanitary inspection.
1920	6	Part time inspection; work started this year.
1921	3	Full time inspection.
1922	3	Full time inspection.

In two of these deaths in 1922 that the cause of death was from intestinal disease, it is doubtful as they were people over 50 years of age and had other chronic complaints.

To claim that all this decrease was due to sanitary measures would be claiming too much credit because it is possible that other causes may have helped besides the sanitary reforms, but that some at least were due to these reforms is certain.

We cannot compute the value of human lives, but the health department is certain that the decrease in the number of deaths from intestinal diseases taken from the bureau of vital statistics on health work during these years.

FRED B. WELCH, Health Officer.
LEIGH J. WOODWORTH, Sanitary Inspector.
